First address of our new Ecclesiastical Assistant

Dear doctors,

At the beginning of the new year, as the newly appointed ecclesiastical assistant of our federation, I have the privilege of addressing you briefly for the first time some lines.

I am very happy about this new task. When I was young, I had the opportunity to assist in many surgeries at the hospital in my hometown. The medical profession has always been the only alternative to my priesthood. Throughout my life I have had a lot of contact with medicine and also many relationships in this field. There are big issues and I think we should make your Catholic voice and medical expertise well heard in society. But about that later!

I learned one thing from you doctors: how to deal well with illness, weaknesses, nasty wounds and smells. I've never seen a doctor let that bother him. They went to work calmly and competently.

For me as a priest that means: not to blame people for their weaknesses, but to heal them; not to judge them, but to make a clear diagnosis and seek means of healing; not to be surprised that people get morally sick and that they sin. In other terms: I have chosen to be more like a doctor, who heals, than like a judge who punishes. I learned that from you and I still feel a passion for this profession. I am a doctor healing souls.

I wish you a blessed 2023. I look forward to encounters and see great challenges ahead of us.

Blessings and love,

Your +Marian Eleganti osb
